Central Otago wine region

Nestled in the heart of New Zealand's South Island, Central Otago is the most southern grape-growing region in the world.

Located 45 degrees south, it shares geographical and climatic conditions with some of the world's most prestigious wine-producing regions. Burgundy and northern Rhone in France, and Oregon's Willamette Valley in the USA, are all located at latitudes between 45 degrees and 47 degrees north.

By far the signature wine of the Central Otago wine region is Pinot Noir. The fantastic strongly scented, world-famous and silky Pinot Noir of Central Otago wine region is often referred to by the locals as the 'Fear of France'. Recently it has also begun to compete closely with the Pinot Noirs of the Napa Valley.

The variety accounts for more than 75% of vineyard plantings, with Chardonnay, Pinot Gris, and Riesling making up the majority of the rest.

Climate

Central Otago is the only area in New Zealand with a semi-continental climate—nowhere else in the country experiences greater daily and seasonal extremes of temperature.

Summers are hot and dry, with autumns cool, generally dry with cold nights. The large diurnal temperature variation (the difference between daytime and night-time temperatures) during ripening contributes to flavour intensity, gives depth of colour and stability to the wines.

Central Otago sub-regions

Gibbston Known for elegant and aromatic Pinot Noir with vibrant red fruit flavors (cherry, cranberry) and fresh acidity. Whites such as Pinot Gris and Riesling are floral and minerally, often showing bright citrus notes.

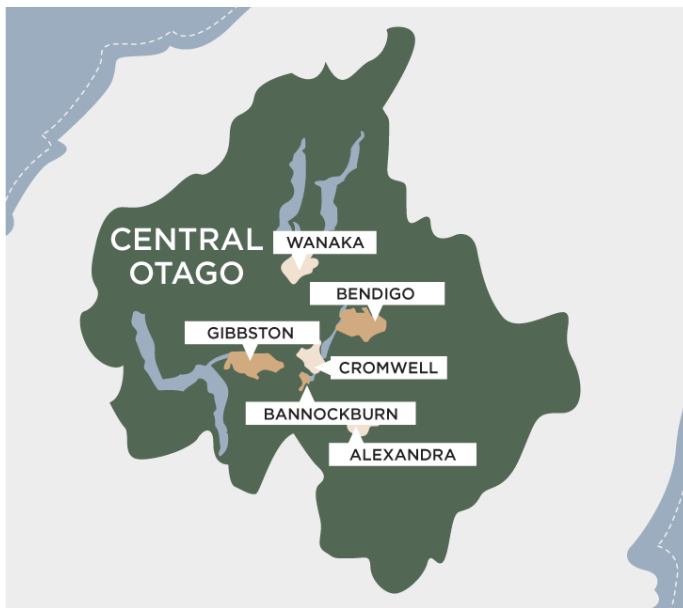

Lowburn & Pisa Pinot Noir is soft and fruit-forward with floral notes and vibrant red berries. Whites are fresh and aromatic, with tropical citrus nuances

Bendigo Produces bold and concentrated Pinot Noir with darker fruit, spice, and herbal undertones.

Bannockburn Produces full-bodied Pinot Noir with rich, dark fruit flavors (blackberry, plum), earthy complexity, and a silky texture. Whites are rounded and lush, with stone fruit and honeyed notes.

Wanaka Pinot Noir is lighter-bodied, with red fruit, floral aromas, and a touch of spice. Whites are refined and elegant, often displaying citrus, apple, and pear flavors.

Alexandra Pinot Noir is delicate and perfumed, with red cherry, raspberry, and herbal notes. Whites are crisp, showing bright minerality and high acidity.
